

Reports from the Regions

Western Australia

The Western Australian State Government has released a Draft Regional Policy Statement for public comment.

Local Government and Regional Development Minister Tom Stephens MLC released the draft policy on 22 November for a three months consultation period.

The development of a regional policy is important in Western Australia considering that over 70 per cent of its population live in the capital city with the remainder of residents spread across the biggest State in the world.

The WA Government has recently put in place a range of new initiatives for regional areas such as a $75million regional investment fund and the restoration of uniform electricity tariffs. The Government also continues to support the nine Regional Development Commissions (RDCs) that have the responsibility to promote and facilitate development in the regions.

The draft policy, developed in conjunction with government agencies, peak bodies and RDCs, aims to establish a framework to ensure that the division of Government resources between Perth and the regions is well planned and managed through a whole of government approach.

The 89 strategies and 76 targets outlined in the draft policy are spread across four goal areas of:

- understanding, partnering and delivering better outcomes for regions;
- growing a diversified economy;
- educated, healthy, safe and supportive communities; and
- valuing and protecting the environment.

Every major aspect of regional activity is covered in the statement, from economic development to the arts, and from natural resource management to regional health issues.

Following the public comment period and analysis of the feedback received, the government will consider a final policy in mid 2003.

Copies of the draft can be obtained from the Western Australian Department of Local Government and Regional Development by contacting (08) 9222 0511 or freecall 1800 620 511 or online at: <http://www.dlgrd.wa.gov.au>

Victoria

Policy Roundup

The recently re-elected Bracks Government in Victoria has announced a number of measures designed to stimulate economic development and population growth in regional Victoria, some innovative and others perhaps politically courageous. The new programs and structures are part of the Victorian Government's 'Building for Tomorrow' policy.

Prior to the election, legislation was passed establishing a new statutory authority, Regional Development Victoria. The new organisation is due to commence operations in March 2003 and will have an investment and jobs focus while at the same time seeking to ensure that all government programs and agencies have a regional focus. It will also facilitate regional infrastructure projects and community development. It will focus specifically on nine identified 'interface' council areas. The legislation also established the Regional Development Advisory Committee.

There is to be a further five year extension of the Regional Infrastructure Development Fund ($180 million). Of this, $20 million will be dedicated to smaller centres through a Small Towns Development Fund. This will be funded on a matching basis and the initial focus will be on towns facing economic difficulties.

A Regional Business Investment Ready Program will assist regional businesses and local authorities to attract investment from superannuation funds and other financial institutions for new investment and infrastructure projects. The Community Capacity Building Initiative will continue. A new $50 million research program, Our Rural Landscape, will aim to increase the profitability and sustainability of Victoria's food and agricultural industries. There is to be a new innovation clusters program in such industries as food and agriculture, health, manufacturing, biotechnology and ICT. Two new Rural Learning Campuses will be created.

The Community Regional Industry Skills Program (CRISP) will develop local strategic plans to identify and address skill and labour shortages in regional areas.

Finally, the Government has announced that it aims to grow regional Victoria's population at the same rate as Melbourne's. This includes both short and longer term goals and seeks to address regional population decline. The Government aims to have the regional population growing by 1.25% per year by 2006. The Government is driven by an understanding of the importance of critical mass to regional economic development, and a conviction that regional service delivery will be enhanced by population growth. The aim is to ensure a better distribution of population growth between Melbourne, the larger regional cities and smaller towns. For example, the population growth rate in regional Victoria fell to below 0.2% annually from 1991-96.

A number of the initiatives come from the Government's regional forums, where concerns about issues such as skills shortages and coordination of government regional initiatives.

FundAssist provides professional assistance to businesses, individuals and local government in gaining access to funding associated with Private (venture capital), Public (government) and Charitable/Philanthropic sources. This assistance is delivered via a range of different services including: preparation of investment briefs and investor introduction services (re venture capital); reviews of funding applications/submissions; complete preparation of funding applications or submissions; tactical and lobbying advice (eg who should be contacted in respect to the project or application/submission); project funding management (assistance and advice in the management of funding deeds/contracts). Packages of services are also available such as our Complete Project Funding Assistance service that includes reviews of applications and submissions, complete preparation of applications and submissions, tactical and lobbying advice and project management advice.

Fees for most services are charged as a percentage of funds being sought or managed. The exact percentage varies according to amount of funding involved (percentage declines as funding amount increases) and type of service (eg Complete Project Funding Assistance involves a higher percentage rate than One Off Funding Application or Submission services). Further, for most services, the majority of our fees are success-based meaning they only become payable when you actually receive funding in respect to our services. Accordingly, it is in our interests only to take on projects when we are fairly confident of a successful outcome. The FundAssist website contains further information about how our fees work for each type of service.

FundAssist also has relationships with several other firms providing specialist service such as Economic and Business Consulting, Office Operation, Workplace Health and Safety, Branding/Graphic Design, Energy Systems/Power Supply, Tourism and Architecture to name a few. The companies with which these working relationships have been established all have a particular emphasis on the delivery of services in Rural and Regional areas. Indeed, FundAssist only deals with Rural and Regional areas and does not service projects in capital cities or their immediate metropolitan surrounds.

Recent Key Projects:

Longreach Saleyards Upgrade Works – funding submission services for the upgrade of the Longreach Saleyards facility. Gemfields Resort Complex – funding submission services for a feasibility study of a resort complex at the Central Queensland Gemfields Central Queensland Employment Consortium Tender – funding submission services in the preparation of a tender under the New Apprenticeships Assistance Program Beef Interpretive Centre – funding for the planning and design of a tourism facility associated with Queensland beef production.
